#23 WHEN THE END COMES

MOLLY

When the end comes,
When the sky blooms
With a burst of color and a strange perfume,
You can call out my name
To the night and the rain,
But I'll be gone.

When the sun beams
Through a still haze
When the sunset lingers for a thousand days
You can reach for my hand in the endless sand,
But I'll be gone.

With your last breath,
As your eyes fade,
As you dream of all the promises of love we made,
You can whisper a prayer and pretend that I'm there,
But I'll be gone.

I'll be gone for the backlash
I'll be gone in the first flash
I'll be there where the lights are brightest of all.

And when the end comes
You can look for me
Though the mist of evening will be all you can see
You can reach for my hand
You can search for my smile
You can listen for my song.

You can call my name but I'll be gone.
